10 things to never say to an anxious child:

1. Don't worry.

You can't will away your child's anxiety by telling him not to worry. He's already worried. This statement implies that the worries are unreasonable or unacceptable. A better approach is: Can you tell me more about your worries?

2. It's no big deal.

Anxious children know that their worries are a big deal. Their worries can negatively affect peer relationships, family relationships, school performance, and other areas of functioning. That's a big deal. Try this, instead: I can see that you're feeling very anxious about this. Let's do some deep breathing together.

3. You'll be fine.

Anyone who has ever experienced excessive anxiety or a panic attack knows that "fine" is not something that resonates with an anxious mind. When a child's anxious mind is racing, he doesn't feel anything close to "fine". Reassure your child with this phrase: I am here to help you.

4. There's nothing to be afraid of.

Anxious kids have plenty to fear: Judgment, peer rejection, failure, and the list goes on. You can't stamp out anxiety with a quick phrase. You can help ease the fears by opening the door to a conversation: Let's talk about that together.

5. You just need to sleep more!

One of the difficult parts of childhood anxiety is that it makes getting to bed difficult. A worried mind tends to race at night when the busyness of the day finally slows down. This isn't your child's fault. Try this: Let's do a meditation app together before bed to help us relax into sleep.

6. I'll do it.

Anxious kids want to confront their worries and be more independent, but anxious thoughts often get in the way. This can lead exasperated parents down the path of "fixing" and "doing". That doesn't help the child build coping skills, though. Use this positive phrase to help your child work through an anxious moment: I know you feel anxious but I know you can do this. I am here to support you.

7. It's all in your head.

Anxiety is a brain-based disorder, but dismissing it in this manner shames the anxious child, increasing feelings of guilt. Use this helpful phrase, instead: It sounds like your worry brain is really loud right now, let's take a walk together and calm that worry brain down.

8. Hurry up!

Anxious kids tend to move at a snail's pace. While some get caught in the trap of perfectionism, others are burdened with feelings of regret when making decisions. Telling them to hurry up only increases feelings of guilt and helplessness. Ask a simple question to help your child move along: How can I help?

9. Stop thinking about it.

Trust me, your child would love to stop thinking anxious thoughts. The problem is that it's very difficult to interrupt the anxious thought cycle without proper supports in place. Try this: Let's talk back to that worry brain by telling it positive stuff!

10. I don't know what you need.

Parenting an anxious child is very difficult and often downright exhausting. Your child needs you to remain calm and hopeful in the face of anxiety, though. If you express hopelessness, your child's anxiety will spike. Try this phrase: Let's brainstorm ways to help calm our minds right now.

It takes time and practice to learn to cope with anxiety. Your child doesn't mean to cling, ask the same questions over and over, or fall apart in the school parking lot. Anxiety makes all of these things (and more) happen for many kids every single day. Seek outside help to get your child the tools he needs to learn to cope and do your best to respond with empathy and compassion when he comes to you with his worries.

Some tips:

- Take a time-out. Practice yoga, listen to music, meditate, get a massage, or learn relaxation techniques. Stepping back from the problem helps clear your head.
- Eat well-balanced meals. Do not skip any meals. Do keep healthful, energy-boosting snacks on hand.
- Limit alcohol and caffeine, which can aggravate anxiety and trigger panic attacks.
- Get enough sleep. When stressed, your body needs additional sleep and rest.
- Exercise daily to help you feel good and maintain your health. Check out the fitness tips below.
- Take deep breaths. Inhale and exhale slowly.
- Count to 10 slowly. Repeat, and count to 20 if necessary.
- Do your best. Instead of aiming for perfection, which isn't possible, be proud of however close you get.
- Accept that you cannot control everything. Put your stress in perspective: Is it really as bad as you think?
- Welcome humor. A good laugh goes a long way.
- Maintain a positive attitude. Make an effort to replace negative thoughts with positive ones.
- Get involved. Volunteer or find another way to be active in your community, which creates a support network and gives you a break from everyday stress.
- Learn what triggers your anxiety. Is it work, family, school, or something else you can identify? Write in a journal when you're feeling stressed or anxious, and look for a pattern.
- Talk to someone. Tell friends and family you're feeling overwhelmed, and let them know how they can help you. Talk to a physician or therapist for professional help.

- Fitness Tips: Stay Healthy, Manage Stress. For the biggest benefits of exercise, try to include at least 2½ hours of moderate-intensity physical activity (e.g. brisk walking) each week, 1¼ hours of a vigorous-intensity activity (such as jogging or swimming laps), or a combination of the two. 5 X 30: Jog, walk, bike, or dance three to five times a week for 30 minutes.
- Set small daily goals and aim for daily consistency rather than perfect workouts. It's better to walk every day for 15-20 minutes than to wait until the weekend for a three-hour fitness marathon. Lots of scientific data suggests that frequency is most important.
- Find forms of exercise that are fun or enjoyable. Extroverted people often like classes and group activities. People who are more introverted often prefer solo pursuits.
- Distract yourself with an iPod or other portable media player to download audiobooks, podcasts, or music. Many people find it's more fun to exercise while listening to something they enjoy.
- Recruit an "exercise buddy." It's often easier to stick to your exercise routine when you have to stay committed to a friend, partner, or colleague.
- Be patient when you start a new exercise program. Most sedentary people require about four to eight weeks to feel coordinated and sufficiently in shape so that exercise feels easier.

Manage yourself well (parents/carers)

- Manage your own worries and anxieties. If you become unwell get help and support; if you don't look after yourself, you will struggle to give the care you want to give to your child
- Don't burden your child with your worries
- Don't treat your child as if they were an adult friend
- Do spend time with your child or teenager – find activities to do together that you will both enjoy. Ordinary activities can be the most rewarding, especially when they have been forgotten and are remembered
- Try to make sure that there is family time as well including mealtimes – this can be a challenge in busy lives but is shown to really help and improve things
- Not all family and friends can offer you the type of support that you want or were expecting for various reasons: they may be busy, unable to talk about feelings or worried that they will say the wrong thing.
- Try not to be disappointed by people. This will use up your energy and changes nothing.
- Ask support from those who you know can help you to avoid disappointment if you ask others.
